1. Copyright and Ownership

© 2026 Royal Artillery Hunt. All rights reserved

The content of this website, including written material, photographs, illustrations, graphics, logos and other original works, is protected by copyright and intellectual property laws.

Unless otherwise stated, copyright in original material created by or for the Royal Artillery Hunt belongs to the Hunt or is used with the permission of the respective copyright holders.

2. Photographs and Historical Material

The Royal Artillery Hunt is proud to preserve and share photographs, documents and historical records relating to its distinguished military and equestrian heritage. Some images and archival materials have been generously provided by members, supporters, photographers and other contributors. Copyright in such material may remain with the original photographer, author or other rights holder.

The inclusion of material on this website does not imply that permission has been granted for its reproduction or use elsewhere. We respectfully ask visitors not to copy, reproduce, publish or distribute photographs or archive material without the appropriate permission, except where permitted by law.

3. Use of Website Content

Visitors are welcome to browse the website and share links to its publicly accessible pages.

Written material, images and other protected content must not be reproduced, modified, republished or used for commercial purposes without permission from the relevant copyright holder, unless such use is permitted by law.

Requests to reproduce material relating to the Royal Artillery Hunt should be directed to the Hunt Secretary.

4. Acknowledgements and Contributions

We are grateful to the photographers, historians, members and supporters who have contributed material to the Royal Artillery Hunt's archives and website. Every reasonable effort is made to acknowledge copyright holders where appropriate.

If you believe that any material displayed on this website infringes your copyright, has been incorrectly attributed or requires further acknowledgement, please contact us. We will review the matter and take appropriate action where necessary.

5. Use of the Royal Artillery Hunt Name and Logo

The Royal Artillery Hunt name, crest and associated insignia form an important part of the Hunt's identity and heritage. Permission should be sought before reproducing or using these for promotional, commercial or other unauthorised purposes.

Any third-party insignia displayed on the website remains subject to the rights of its respective owner.
